Licence and copyright information

Ring-binder and spiral bound format learning resources may be photocopied for use by staff based at the site for which the item has been purchased.

Learning resources on CD may be networked, printed, and the contents photocopied for use by staff based at the site which the item has been purchased.

Books and booklets are subject to the usual copyright restrictions.

Software (except Adult Options) is sold on an annual 'site licence' basis, the purchaser may load it onto computers or a local area network covering the purchasing (or other nominated) site plus up to 25 laptops based at that site. Where a customer operates from more than one site then they must have a separate licence for each site, unless otherwise agreed by Babcock Lifeskills in writing.

Online Products are sold on a site or area basis. "Site basis" allows any staff based at the site to use the product. They may use the product with clients who may subsequently use the product from home for personal use. They may not give out usernames or access codes to third parties. An "Area Licence" will cover a geographical area and will allow staff working within the area the right to use the product with their clients. Where the licence is purchased for a particular contract or purpose then the product may only be used in conjunction with that contract.

A "site" is defined by postcode. Two offices sharing a postcode would be defined as one site. If the offices have different postcodes then they would be considered as separate sites (unless otherwise agreed by Babcock Lifeskills in writing).
